DEADLOCK IS NOW ON OVER WORKINGMEN'S
COMPENSATION BILL*Conference Committee Unable to Agree Upon Its Provisions.*APPROPRIATIONS FIGHT STARTS*Clark Commission Government Bill Is Slow in Reaching Governor; Allegedly Members Find It on Speaker's Desk; Tender to Settle Re-Election.

United Press Telegram
HARRISBURG, June 17.—The conference committee of the House and Senate met this morning but was unable to agree upon the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Bill. Another meeting will be held tonight at which an effort to reach an agreement will be made. The senatorial members of the conference object to the insurance provision of the act, the enactment of which is demanded by the authors of the bill.

The House appropriations committee this morning recommended an appropriation of $50,000 for Washington and Jefferson College. The fight on the $42,000,000 Appropriations Bill began in the House this morning and present indications are that it will continue all day. The first amendment to the measure provides that the appropriation for the attorney general's contingent fund be cut from $20,000 to $20,000, and that none of the appropriation be used by the attorney general in the paying of the expenses attached to the investigation held last year by the Catlin commission into the irregularities of Philadelphia city government.

The Irwin bill substituting salaries for fees in county offices in counties from 100,000 to 150,000 inhabitants was defeated this morning for the second time.

It is up to Governor Tener now to say whether the executives of municipalities outside of Philadelphia shall be allowed, the people willing, to succeed themselves. The House last night passed finally the Waters bill permitting the executives of municipalities to succeed themselves. The vote was 118 to 55. The measure has already passed the Senate by a decisive majority.

Both House and Senate have passed by overwhelming majorities the Clark bill making the mayors of third class cities eligible for immediate succession though a committee last night discovered this measure had not reached the executive as it should have. Two weeks ago the last such action was taken on the Geary bill. The committee of the second class cities to succeed themselves. It was delayed more than ten days in getting to the Governor's table and was not certified by Speaker Aker until his attention was called to the delay by a committee of the Allegheny County delegation. The Governor is required to act on the Geary measure this week.

A committee of senators and members of the House, hearing a rumor tonight that the Clark third class city bill had not reached the Governor, finally found the bill uncanceled on the desk of Speaker Aker. The latter said it had been an oversight and that he would pass the bill along to the Governor in the morning.

The representatives were very wroth and intimated that there was a connecting link between the holding out of the Clark bill and the Governor's action on the Geary bill.

The Senate this morning passed finally the McNichol bill, providing for the direct nomination and election of United States Senators similar to the election of the Governor.

Mr. Kehler states that the work of erecting a power house will begin as soon as the franchise is granted by the borough. He says the company would like to be in a position to furnish heat and power here before fall.

AGED MURDERER CUTS THROAT
AFTER HOLDING POSSE AT BAY*Dead Body Found in Shock After All-Night Stand Against Sheriff and His Men.

United Press Telegram
FRANKLIN, Pa., June 17.—Edward Bartholomew, aged 60, who yesterday shot through the head and killed Samuel Crowther as the latter begged on his knees for his life, was found this morning in a little old shack with his neck cut. After holding the sheriff's posse at bay all night, early this morning Bartholomew cut his throat and laid down on a bunk and died.

The shooting occurred at a sand pit 10 miles from town. Crowther was foreman of the place, having charge of the operations. Late in the afternoon he had words with Bartholomew and during the quarrel, the old man whipped a revolver from his pocket, flourished it in the air and threatened to take the foreman's life. Crowther then dropped to his knees and begged for mercy. Bartholomew shot Crowther on the spot.

Following the shooting, workmen saw Bartholomew run across a field and take to the woods. Sheriff Chas. Honan formed a posse, which took the trail. They traced the murderer to the shack where he had barricaded himself behind the door. The sheriff was compelled to send to town for reinforcements. When these were secured another effort was made to rush the shack, but it was unsuccessful.

When daylight appeared the posse surrounded the little building and broke in the door. They found Bartholomew.

HOT WAVE IS HEREMercury is Hitting the High Spots and Humidity Persists.

The temperature has been hitting the high spots for the past few days. Yesterday afternoon the maximum of 92 degrees was reached, one degree warmer than the sweltering weather of Sunday. The only one who really delights in it is the small boy. Youngsters are having lots of fun in the water these days and the river banks are rather liberally populated. Last night a storm threatened, but it escaped the city. A heavy rain cloud gathered and sharp flashes of lightning were followed by ominous thunder-claps. Nothing in the rain line developed. A shower would do much good. The crops need rain badly, while city dwellers are finding the dust annoying. To say the least, even Jim Stauffer's water wagon is making little impression upon the dusty thoroughfares.

CAN RAISE RATES.West Virginia Coal Roads May Make 10 Cent Advance.

Freight tariffs, canceling through rates and routes on soft coal from West Virginia and Kentucky mines across the Great Lakes to Milwaukee and other Northwestern destinations, were ordered withdrawn by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Operation of the proposed tariffs would have resulted in the application of alleged prohibitive rates, closing routes which have been open for many years. Existing rates were held to be the duty of carriers to pay the least increase of 10 cents a ton.

Arraigned before the burgess this morning he was found guilty of drunkenness and was given the usual 48 hours.

Demand Educated Mules.
The muleers at Rush Run, W. Va., went out on strike because new mules were put into service to haul the coal. The 300 men employed declared the new mules could not haul the coal fast enough and as a result they were losing time and money. Officials of the company sent the old educated mules back to the mines and the muleers resumed their work.

WITNESSES MISSINGSeveral Men Wanted in Judicial Probe
Are Not Served.

The subpoenaed persons who form the advance guard of the judicial investigation are rapidly completing their work and most of the papers have been served on witnesses who are expected to reveal the inside story of the two judicial campaigns when the Legislature meets in September.

Several Uniontown men are said to be out of the state. Among them are George F. Tiltow, R. F. Sample, G. G. Gans, R. I. Patterson, James Moran, J. I. Feather and R. F. Hopwood.

With the exception of Mr. Feather, satisfactory explanations have been given as to the absence of these men from the county, Gans, for instance, is now on his wedding trip.

It was reported about the county seat that Feather is in Canada. He was expected to give an important testimony regarding the affairs of the Lehigh Brewing Company as they might bear some relation to the probe.

Among the local men subpoenaed to testify are W. D. McGinnis, Rockwell Marietta, A. D. Solson, William Dull, A. A. Straub and Bert Laughrey.

To escape the shots, Baker fell to the ground, and evidently believing that he had accomplished his purpose Hart took to his heels.

ANOTHER LANDMARK DOOMED; WAREHOUSE
TO TAKE ITS PLACE*Old Murray Building in Mendow Lane to be
Razed.*IS TOWN'S OLDEST DWELLING*Built Century Ago by Robert Mac-Guire, Who Had a Jewelry Store in the Morton Block on Main Street, Wood is Well Preserved Despite Age.

Old landmarks that have been familiar sights for years are being razed one by one to make way for buildings of modern construction. Work of demolishing one of the oldest of these, the Murray property in Mendow lane will be started in a few days. The building is to be torn down by its owner John D. Erlsbee, who will erect a large warehouse in its place.

The exact age of the Murray building is not definitely known but it is more than a century old. The building is believed to be the oldest in town. Since first erected by Robert MacGuire several additions have been made to it. It now consists of six rooms, with a kitchen in the rear. The building is two stories high.

Although the old building has been used as a warehouse for a number of years, traces of the character of the place are still visible. Leading from the rear of the building is an old-fashioned stairway that ascends almost vertically. It is less than two feet in width and difficult to ascend. On the first floor are three of the old-fashioned fireplaces, one in the front room, one in the dining room and one in the kitchen. The fireplace in the rear room. The fireplaces are substantial.

The lumber in the interior of the house is well preserved. Great oak beams formed the framework upon which the structure was erected and they are in excellent condition. Later improvements to the house have covered much of the old framework, and while they have decayed, the framework still lives evidence of the thoroughness of the old carpenters.

As a nearly new tenant the house was erected more than a century ago by Robert McGuire who lived in it until his death. Mr. McGuire was a silversmith and conducted his business in the old Morton property on Main street now occupied by Henson's drug store. Following his death his daughter Mrs. Joseph Murray, fell heir to the property and she lived in it for many years. After her death her daughter Mrs. Sadie Robbins secured it. Then it passed into the hands of the Methodist Episcopal Church which sold it to Mr. Erlsbee.

The owner will raze the building to erect a modern warehouse. The new building will be of frame and brick construction and will be 65 feet square. The two years the pump on the Murray property was famous. It was literally the town drinking fountain. The water was cool and sparkling at all times, pure as water can be. When the boundaries of Connellsville did not extend beyond North, South and East streets it was not uncommon for the majority of the householders to get their drinking water from the Murray well. To the stranger within the city's gates, the well was always pointed out and few visitors left without sampling its water.

This splendid plant possesses every facility for putting into the pianos and players it builds the utmost value for the smallest cost. These Club Pianos and Players prove it.

THE CO-OPERATIVE PIANO CLUB was original with this house. It was a natural development of certain selling activities that have been employed by us for many years with wonderful success. Five years ago we announced our First Club, with 200 Pianos contracted for. It was a signal success. Last year, for our Fourth Club, we placed orders for 1,000 instruments, combining Pianos and Players. The sales actually exceeded the original number by fully one-fourth. For this year's Club we placed contracts, upwards of a year in advance, for 2,000 instruments, equally divided between Pianos and Players. May we not consistently ask the public to carefully distinguish between a Club, deliberately and systematically planned and worked out, and a "Club" that is the nature of the case is no more than an assumption of an attractive offer? The W. F. Frederick Co-operative Clubs are an established activity; not a mere device for a sale. They cannot be successfully imitated.

We have genuine pleasure in offering the members of our Club this year the great FOSTER PIANO AND PLAYER PIANO. We are glad to assure you that these instruments have all the famed merits of the famous Foster Piano and Players—plus additions required by our own specifications. These 2,000 instruments were made especially for this Club and embrace special features that are exclusive and that materially increase their value. They are, therefore, new, direct from the factory and good beyond a question. Each instrument has received most thorough inspection and testing, and is sold under the strongest possible guarantee of perfection of tone, quality, material and finish. The prices and terms and special features of the contract that members are given are possibilities only because of the genuine co-operative principle involved in this gigantic enterprise. Our almost unlimited outlet makes it possible for us to market cheaply even the unprecedented number of 2,000 instruments in a given short time. We operate over 100 stores and agencies and reach through them fully 20 millions of people. Our 300 salesmen are in constant touch with prospective buyers throughout this vast territory. We therefore had no hesitancy in agreeing with the manufacturer to take 2,000 instruments to get a sharp reduction from usual factory prices. Our own profit can be cut equally, for our selling expenses in such a case will be greatly lessened. It is reasonable to expect that the membership, even though it looks large, will be quickly filled. For us, naturally, the "sooner the better." We will bend every effort to get the last of the 2,000 at the earliest day we can. The shorter the time the more we save. For you who contemplate the purchase of an instrument—there is just one wise course. Investigate promptly. Don't put it off.

W. F. FREDERICK PIANO CLUB SPECIAL FEATURES

When we have secured the utmost value possible for the price (absolutely one and unchangeable to each and all), then we give you something besides, by shaving expenses, cutting down a profit here and there, availing of a discount by cash settlement with manufacturers, improvements in our own way, by perfect selling organization—or in any possible way either save you something or give you something.

So now, what you get—in price saving, in greatly modified terms and special saving and protective "extras."

EARLY CLOSING THOUGHTS.

The name of Kobacker is familiar to Connelville merchants. The first of the Kobacker merchants to come here was Jacob H. Kobacker. His establishment was modest, but his energy was unflagging, his enterprise unaltered, his ambition boundless; and it was not many years until the Kobacker stores were the biggest in Connelville. Myria Kobacker is no longer in Connelville, but Connelville is never entirely absent from his thoughts, as the following communication addressed to the editor of The Courier indicates:

"I am delighted to read in The Courier that the early closing movement in Connelville has become an established custom. When my brother and I were located in Connelville we were in thorough sympathy with the early closing policy. I felt at that time, some 12 or 13 years ago, that Connelville had outgrown its cross-roads store-keeping manner and was ready to conduct its mercantile establishments upon modern methods, doing business in business hours and giving the employee a chance to rest when it is time to rest. We thought that persons working in the stores were entitled to some diversion and some time to get acquainted with the dear ones at home. I congratulate you upon your paper having assisted in this commendable movement."

The early closing movement originated among the merchants themselves. The Courier gave it cordial endorsement as a practical progressive movement. Some business establishments are compelled to keep open for the benefit of the public, but others are not. The grocery stores have been closing early for some time past. There is no reason why drygoods and most general merchandising stores should not close at the same time. The public will accommodate itself to the change and the stores will do just as much business.

On the other hand, drug stores must remain open early and late to mitigate the sufferings of humanity; theatres must open in the evening, because few people have time to attend them during the day; the hotels and the railroads must run at all hours and on Sundays to meet the demands of the traveling public; some industrial establishments are obliged to run continuously and the laborer is not conducive to proper rest and recreation.

There is, therefore, all the more reason why stores and other commercial establishments which can reduce their hours of labor without loss to the public or to themselves should do so.

LOCAL AND STATE ROADS.

The automobile is undoubtedly responsible for the great awakening in Pennsylvania on the Good Roads question, and while the motive was naturally somewhat benign and not wholly public-spirited, such selfishness as may be involved is submerged in the general good.

Nevertheless the joy riders should not be too critical. Our attention has been called to the complaint of a Connelville "citizen and member of the Automobile Club of Fayette County," who objects to the brick road, or section of road, being built in Bulklin township, because he says "it is laid out to run up to the Rock Long and Rock Marietta farms," and that "it has no place to go after it gets there."

The Bulklin township road is not a state road, but a township road. Its cost is paid equally by the township and the county, that is the township builds a mile and the county builds the next mile. The road is planned to follow the valley through to the Somerset pike, which is now being rebuilt under state authority. The Bulklin road has much better grades than the Mount Pleasant road and for eastern travel cuts off six or eight miles.

The complainant is not a taxpayer of Bulklin township and is not in a position to be decided about the location of the brick road in question, no matter whose lands it may pass. The Bulklin authorities might have bridged the Mount Pleasant road to form part of a highway between county seats provided in the Sprout law, but such a road would skirt only a portion of the edges of the township, and would be of little value to Bulklin township people. They want a permanent road through the heart of their township, and that is what they have started to build.

They are building for themselves, and judging from the map they are building wisely.

Whatever measure of justice and statesmanship there was in the Republican Tariff laws, it can be said of them that they were framed and debated in the open forum before all the people, and not behind closed doors like the Democratic Tariff bill now being jammed through the Congress.

It is said to be easy to break a will, but it is not so to be. The last wishes of a dying man or woman touching his or her estate should not be lightly set aside.

Two-cent passenger rates on the railroads are local if the state says so. They are also economical.

The Western Maryland has curtailed its local passenger service on the Connelville division and is going in for through business. The logic of this move lies in the fact that through business may be created while local traffic must grow.

The old pike from Mount Pleasant to Somerset is having its youth renewed by the state road authorities. Everything comes to those who wait, if they can wait long enough.

The state will have plenty of good material from which to select its mine inspectors, and those who are not chosen will doubtless be called to other states or other positions of trust and profit. Their examination certificates are worth money to them.

The American Coal Mining Institute was booked for Wilkes-Barre, but it slipped over from the antitoxic to the bituminous center.

It is to be hoped that Democratic Currency Reform will command more of the country's confidence than Democratic Tariff Reform has gained.

A West Side fishing club has very sensibly concluded to eat its fish dinner at home, before starting out on a bacon-and-bean diet.

Secretary Bryan must feel embarrassed at the spectacle of a Democratic administration making war on the natives of the Philippines.

Railroad managers are developing into orators of first magnitude. Necessity is the mother of progress as well as invention. Yesterday everybody talked for the railroads; today, they have to speak for themselves.

South Connelville needs some new councilmen and a new rule reducing quorum requirements.

Ponderous Personages.

JOHN WESLEY,

By GEORGE FITCH,

Author of "At Good Old Slawash."

This is the birthday of John Wesley, who is practically unknown in political circles but whose university is celebrated with great reverence by millions of Methodists who are following his recipe for saint-making with great success.

Wesley was born in England, June 17, 1703. He went to Oxford, and after a notable athletic and social career became a deacon and settled down to a life of endowed piety in the English church.

Wesley attended the local plays and fairs, shot plover and enjoyed himself as an English rector until his attention was one day turned towards religion. He then began to study theology and to analyze his soul with great diligence, and in order to perfect himself for his future work he returned to Oxford and lived on $140 a year. In 1735 he came to Georgia to convert the Indians, but found more promising material among the English at Savannah and organized a church which he called the Methodist Church. His health failing, he returned to London where he preached and prayed and on the 24th of May, 1738, at a quarter before nine in the evening, was converted after the modern Methodist manner and went forth to preach in the fields and streets.

From this time Wesley's eloquence was irresistible and he converted many meetings, not even ushers and politicians excepting. His church grew rapidly in spite of great opposition. Wesley faced mobs all his life and learned to look at a seething multitude, armed with bricks, in the eyes with more calmness than the modern candidate can face three voters armed with a request for an appointment. Wesley lived to a great old age, and before he died in 1791, he bequeathed the Methodist Church to the membership by appointing 100 pastors to look after its affairs.

"He came to convert the Indians but found more promising material among the English."

John Wesley was greatly beloved and is still glorified. But some attention should be paid to his patient father, Samuel, who brought up nearly a score of children on a rector's salary so carefully that three of them became famous ministers and hymnwriters and none of them smoked cigarettes.

The Spirit of

Later-Day Advertising.

As we have said before, the purpose of THE COURIER is first of all to serve its readers. To do this is not only the right moral attitude toward our constituency but it is good business, speaking from a purely business standpoint.

And so it is that we point out from day to day the advertising features of this paper and the advantages to be gained from keeping posted in all of the news thus presented.

The spirit of advertising is different today from that of a few years ago. The idea no longer is to fool and to misrepresent, but to inform and to invite. And it is the constant aim of the good merchant to stick resolutely to facts.

It is this spirit on the part of advertisers that makes for confidence and enables us to direct the attention of our readers to the profitable practice of "ad" reading, feeling that in so doing we render them a distinct service.

TWO BOOSTERS FOR THE FIREMEN'S NEXT CONVENTION

Panxutawney has a New Method for Interesting Volunteers.

THE JACOBS CREEK ANNIVERSARY

Fiftieth One to be Observed by Special Services Opening Near Scotland on Wednesday; Other Notes of News
In and Around the Busy Mill Town.

Special to The Courier.
SCOTSDALE, June 17.—C. O. Duff and R. J. Hanley, boosters for the Western Pennsylvania Firemen's annual convention, which will be held in Panxutawney, August 12 and 13, spent some time here arousing interest in the event. This idea of sending boosters around to each of the towns having a volunteer department is a new one, and the boys from the Groundhog town say that the 20th annual convention will be long to be remembered.

As the meeting is in the town celebrated for being the site of the Groundhog. Weather. Work. The promise is for good weather during the convention. Fifteen hundred dollars will be offered in cash prizes, and this is by $200 the greatest prize money ever offered at one of the association conventions.

Panxutawney has been in the association for four years and this is the first time that the convention has been held in a Jefferson County town. The population of the community is estimated to be about 11,000 and the town is making great preparations for the entertainment of the visiting firemen.

The advisory board will meet there on Saturday, and Scotland will likely be represented by Chief Edward Mc-Clain of the veteran firemen's committee; Councilman Roy Baker and St. Kelly, who is the oldest member of the association from this place.

The boosters are arranging for a special train to go over the Baltimore & Ohio to Panxutawney. The train is 103 miles east of Pittsburgh, and it is estimated that the trip will cost about $6.50 for the round trip fare.
Mount Pleasant signifies their intention of taking 75 and a band, and Scotland, Elversen and Connellsville will probably go on the same train.
Messrs Duff and Hanley are seeing about these arrangements.

COMMITTEES NAMED.
Under the new constitution adopted by the Men's Bible Class of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the present officers are continued until the next election, and President
M. L. Hasness was empowered to appoint the new committee as provided for. He has named the following:
Memberships—J. J. Strickler, J. E.
DeWitt, W. W. Hines, A. C. Myers and J. Lester Porter. Devotional—John Lloyd, B. H. McFarland, Robert
Wiley, Jacob Rees and Jesse A.
Stauffer. Ballotting—Dr. O. F. Hess,
S. J. Zearley, L. R. Boyd, A. S. Walton and Albert J. Porter. Social—H. H.
Newcomer, S. B. Reed, G. H. Lockard,
M. M. Trout and Leonard Lingenfeld.

DAVE A. DINNER.

Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Blower entertained at a little dinner party at their home on Market street on Friday evening. Those present were Rev.
and Mrs. H. S. Piper, Mr. and Mrs.
H. D. Jarrett, Dr. and Mrs. J. F.
Strickler, and Mr. and Mrs. M. B.
Porter.

FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY.
The fiftieth anniversary of the Jacobs Creek Methodist Episcopal Church will be celebrated this week,
Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday are the celebration days, with former pastors of the church present as speakers. The Sunday meeting will open with a singing gathering; there will be a meeting at 10 o'clock; dinner served at the church; and afternoon Sunday School session and platform meeting and an evening service.

NO RAIN CAME.

Monday was the hottest day of the summer thus far experienced here, and there was a great deal of suffering by reason of the heat. There were a number of the mill men succumbed to the heat during the afternoon and night. In the evening there was a great deal of thunder and lightning from the west and east and good prospects of a rain, but it failed to come. There was much of the time in the evening a good breeze going that went far toward reducing the discomfort from the heat. There was extreme need of rain as the ground is baked dry and dust is several inches deep on the roads. Some rain would help wonderfully with the fields and gardens.

NOT FOR MEN

Just a Little Sermon for Girls
Every day many girls in Connelsville pass the banks on one strand or another, without, perhaps, once thinking how much a bank account would help them. To a girl the possession of a savings account while she is young may mean very much to her when she reaches womanhood. It may mean a college education, necessary money for a trousseau, or a delightful trip abroad. There has been made "one long sweet song" because the wife learned to save when a girl and later taught her husband the same useful lesson. It's just as important for a girl to learn to save as it is to know how to bake and sew.
And so, girls, may we end this little sermon, by advising you to open a savings account with a good reliable bank. The First National of Connelsville, for instance, which is solid as a rock and pays 4% interest.—Adv.

horses became frightened and ran off throwing the girls out. Jean came down on her head and was rendered unconscious. Sarah was so badly bruised and scratched that she could not take part in the Children's Day exercises. Joseph Snyder caught the horse after it had run about a half mile.

Corset Comfort and Corset Gentleness in "MADAME GRACE"

"Whoever expects a corset to be gentle!" is what some women say. They are the women who, through never having worn Madame Grace Corsets, do not know that elegance and comfort need not tread on each other's toes in a corset. It has taken the makers over twenty years of continuous effort to attain their ideals of styles and yet preserve their fundamentals of comfort. How well they have achieved the union you will recognize at once when you have been fitted with the special model among the many different Madame Grace styles which is designed to bring supple youthfulness to your particular figure. Why not today? Our corset fitters are at your service.

Do You Need Assistance

IN THE SELECTION OF YOUR WALL PAPER

There is a logical sequence governed largely by the existing conditions in your home which if followed will produce correct results. Each room should be treated so as to give it correct form and proportions.

Then there is the question of color and design which must suit the individualities of each room as well as harmonize with the adjoining rooms. Especially is this true of parlors, dining room and reception hall—any group of rooms when considered collectively.

I can render you valuable assistance in the selection of your Wall Papers.

We have seen considerable comment in these columns over the appointment of a woman as a carrier on one of the R. P. D. routes out of the metropolis of the Yough. It was mistaken not to say that she would be the only one of the sex to fill the position in the county and that if she can weather the chilly blasts of winter and the driving rains of summer her qualifications will be complete, etc. Now we beg to say that whatever honor attaches to the position of a woman R. P. D. carrier is due to Mrs. W. G. Kable, whose husband, W. G. Kable, has served as a carrier from Smithfield since the service was established here. Seven years ago Mrs. Kable has substituted carrier on a distance of 25 miles taking in Davidson town and White House along the foot of the mountain, served the portions of the route in all kinds of weather to the satisfaction of the department and patrons on the route making her deliveries promptly.

MINERS COURT DANGER.

Shooting From Solid Is Most Risky Practice in the Industry.

Advance sheets of his report for 1912 show that John Laling, Chief of the Department of Mines, makes the proud boast that "shooting off the solid" has been nearly eliminated in West Virginia. Interest is added to this statement by the fact that the miners are making a determined effort to secure the repeal of a law recently enacted in Oklahoma prohibiting this highly dangerous practice.

Government statistics show that more than 48 per cent of deaths in coal mines are due to falls of rock. One of the principal causes of these falls is "shooting off the solid." A shot in that solid seam is also more likely to blow out the tamping, so that the flames may set fire to coal-dust or gas, thus causing an explosion that may wipe out scores of lives.

This dangerous practice has been discouraged in West Virginia by a vigilant system of inspection, backed by relentless prosecutions of offenders. The 1911 report of the Chief of the Department of Mines shows that 105 miners were fined an aggregate of $1,493 for shooting off the solid in that year. This vigorous enforcement of the law evidently had its effect in 1912.

WILL BORE FOR OIL.

Test Hole to Be Sunk on Mosholder Farm in Somerset County.

SOMERSET, June 17.—An enormous oil well derrick on the Samuel R. Mosholder farm in Milford township was finished yesterday. The casing for the new oil well is on the ground, and the other casing machinery to complete the drilling outfit is on the way. The drilling equipment will be the most powerful ever used in Somerset County.

The Mosholder farm has shown signs of oil for many years past. The "oldest inhabitant" saw these superficial symptoms when he was a boy. The Manufacturers Oil & Gas Company of Pittsburgh is putting down the prospect hole, and if the first well does not prove successful more wells will be put down in the Milford region, where the company has about 15,000 acres under option.

Freezing Method in Mining. Coal mining in Holland has become practicable through the "freezing" method of sinking shafts through the stratum of wet drift sand which underlies the solid rock formations. The sand and water are frozen until a casing can be built about the shaft.

DANNY'S OWN STORY

By DON MARQUIS

Copyright, 1912, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

"But the bottom had dropped out of the universe for me. She had said she hated me. I was fool enough to believe her. I went downtown and began to drink. I came home late that night. The poor girl had been waiting up for me—waiting for hours and becoming more and more frightened when I didn't show up. She was over her jealous fit, I suppose. If I had come home in good shape or in anything like it, we would have made up then and there. But my condition stopped all that. I wasn't so drunk but that I saw her face change when she let me in. She was disgusted."

"In the morning I was sick and feverish. I was more than disgusted with myself. I was in despair. So when she told me that she had written home again and was going back—was going to leave me, I didn't see that it was only a bluff. I didn't see that she was really only waiting to forgive me, if I gave her a chance. I started downtown, wondering when she would leave, and if there was anything I could do to make her change her mind."

"If I had gone straight to work everything might have come around all right even then. But I didn't. I had that what-the-use feeling. And I stopped in at the Palmer House bar to get something to sort of pull me together."

"While I was there who should come up to the bar and order a drink but Prentiss McMakin."

"Yes," says Colonel Tom, as near excited as he ever got.

"I told him about Miss Hampton. 'Yes,' says Armstrong, 'nobody else I thought of. I intended to do some mischief—shoot me, you know, for taking his wife to be away from him or some fool thing like that. But as we turned toward each other I saw he had no intention of that sort.'"

"Huh? He?" says Colonel Tom, mightily interested.

"No," says the doctor, looking at Colonel Tom very puzzled. "Did you think he had?"

"Yes, I did," says the colonel, right thoughtful.

"On the contrary," says Armstrong, "we had a drink together. And he congratulated me. Made me quite a little speech in fact, one of the flowery kind, you know, Tom, and said that he bore me no rancor and all that."

"The deuce he did!" says Colonel Tom very low, like he was talking to himself. "And then what?"

"Then," says the doctor, "then—let me see. It's all a long time ago, you know, and McMakin's part in the whole thing isn't really important."

"I'm not so sure it isn't important," says the colonel, "but go on."

"Then," says Armstrong, "we had another drink together—in fact, a lot of them. We got awfully friendly. And like a fool I told him of my quarrel with Lucy."

"Like a fool," says Colonel Tom, nodding his head. "Go on."

"There isn't much more to tell," says the doctor, "except that I made a worse idiot of myself yet and left McMakin about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, as near as I can recollect. Somewhere about 10 o'clock that night I went home. Lucy was gone. I haven't seen her since."

"Dave," says Colonel Tom, "did McMakin happen to mention to you that day just why he was in Chicago?"

"I suppose so," says the doctor. "I don't know. Maybe not. That was long ago. Why?"

"Because," says Colonel Tom, very grim and quiet, "because your first thought as to his intention when he met you in the bar was my idea also. I thought he went to Chicago to settle with you. You see, I got to Chicago that same afternoon."

"The same day?"

"Yes," says the doctor, "the same day."

"The same day?"

"The same day?"

"The same day?"

"Yes. 'We were to have come together. But I missed the train, and he got there a day ahead of me. He was waiting at the hotel for me to join him, and then we were going to look you up together. He found you first, and I never did find you.'"

"But I don't exactly understand," says the doctor. "You say he had the idea of shooting me?"

"I don't understand everything myself," says Colonel Tom. "But I do understand that Prentiss McMakin must have played some sort of a two-faced game. He never said a word to me about having seen you."

"Listen," he goes on. "When you and Lucy ran away it nearly killed our grandfather. In fact, it finally did kill him. When we got Lucy's letter that told you were in Chicago I went up to bring her back home. We didn't know what we were going to do, McMakin and I, but we were both agreed that you needed killing. And he swore that he would marry Lucy anyhow, even—"

"Marry her?" sings out the doctor. "But we were married!"

"Dave," Colonel Tom says very slow and steady, "you keep saying you were married. But it's strange. It's right strange about that marriage."

"But, Tom," says the doctor, "that letter she wrote you from Chicago must—"

"Do you know what Lucy wrote?" interrupts Colonel Tom. "I remember exactly. It was simply: 'Forgive me. I loved him so. I am happy. I know it is wrong, but I love him so you must forgive me.'"

"But couldn't you tell from that we were married?" cries out the doctor.

"She didn't mention it," says Colonel Tom.

"She supposed that her own family had enough faith in her to take it for granted," says the doctor, very scornful, his face getting red.

"But wait, Dave," says Colonel Tom, quiet and cool. "Don't bluster with me. There are still a lot of things to be explained. And that marriage is one of them."

"To go back a bit. You say you got to the house somewhere around 10 o'clock that evening and found Lucy gone. Do you remember the day of the month?"

"It was Nov. 14, 1888."

"Exactly," says Colonel Tom. "I got to Chicago at 8 o'clock of that very day. And I went at once to the address in Lucy's letter. I got there between 7 and 8 o'clock. She was gone. My thought was that you must have got wind of my coming and persuaded her to leave with you in order to avoid me—although I didn't see how you could know when I would get there, either, when I thought it over."

"And you have never seen her since," says Armstrong, pondering.

"I have seen her since," says Colonel Tom, "and that is one thing that makes me say your story needs further explanation."

"But where—when—did you see her?" asks the doctor mightily excited.

"I am coming to that. I went back home again. And in July of the next year I heard from her."

"Hear from her?"

"My letter. She was in Galesburg, Ill. If you know where that is, she was living there alone, and she was almost destitute. I wrote her to come home. She would not, but she had to live. I got rid of some of our property in Tennessee and took enough cash up there with me to fix her in a decent sort of way for the rest of her life and put it in the bank. I was with her there for ten days; then I went back home to get Aunt Lucy Davis to help me in another effort to persuade her to return, but when I got back north with Aunt Lucy she had gone."

"Gone?"

"Yes, and when we returned without her to Tennessee there was a letter telling us not to try to find her. We thought—I thought—that she might have taken up with you once again."

"But my God, Tom!" the doctor bursts out. "You were with her ten days there in Galesburg! Didn't she tell you then—couldn't you tell from the way she acted—that she had married me? Didn't you ask her?"

"Ask her? No. Can't you see that there was no reason why I should ask her? I was sure, and being sure of it, naturally I didn't talk about it to her. You can understand that I wouldn't, can't you? In fact, I never mentioned you to her. She never mentioned you to me."

"You must have mistaken her, Tom," said the colonel. "I tell you that there's something odd about it—married or not. Lucy didn't believe herself married the last time I saw her."

"But she must have known," says the doctor, as much to himself as to the colonel. "She must have known."

"Any one could of told by the way he said it that he wasn't lying."

"Whatever became of Prentiss McMakin, Tom?"

"Dead," says Colonel Tom. "Quite awhile ago."

"H-m," says the doctor, still thinking hard, and then looks at Colonel Tom like they was an idea in his head.

Which he don't speak her out, but Colonel Tom seems to understand.

"Yes," he says, nodding his head. "I think you are on the right track now. Yes—I shouldn't wonder."

"Well, they put this and that together and they agree that whatever happened to make things hard to explain must of happened on that day that Prentiss McMakin met the doctor in the barroom and 'didn't shoot him as he had made his brags he would. Most of happened between the time that afternoon when Prentiss McMakin left the doctor and the time Colonel Tom went out to see his sister and found she had went. Most of happened somehow through Prent McMakin."

and the colonel they walked right past us when she said yes and up toward the house and left her and me standing there. When I next looked up they were all in the house."

"Martha," I begins. But she breaks in.

"Hello!"

"Martha, she is surprised to see me and she looks scared too."

"Is Miss Buckner at home?" asks Colonel Tom, lifting his hat very politely.

"Miss B-B-Buckner?" Martha stutters, very scared-like and not taking her eyes off of me to answer him.

"Miss Hampton, Martha," I says.

"Y-y-y-es, a-sh-be is," says Martha. I wondered what was the matter with her.

It is always my luck to get left all alone with my troubles. The doctor me, whatever it was she might be talking about.

"And then he came to town—"

"Who?" I asks her.

"Don't you know?" she says. "The man I am going to marry."

When she said that I felt all of a sudden like when you are broke and hungry and run across a half dollar you had forgot about in your other pants. I was so glad I jumped.

"Grent guns!" I says. I had never really knowed what being glad was before.

"Oh, Danny, Danny," she says, putting her hands in front of her face and here you have come to claim me for your bride."

"Martha," I says, "you ain't acted right with me."

"Oh, Danny, Danny," she says, "I know it; I know it!"

"Some fellows in my place," I says, "would raise a dickens of a row."

"I did love you once," she says, looking at me from between her fingers.

"Yes," says I, acting real melancholy, "you did. And now you've quit it. They don't seem to me to be nothing left to live for. Some fellows would kill themselves on the spot."

"Oh, oh, oh!" says Martha.

"But, Martha," says I, "I ain't that mean. I ain't going to do that."

That darn girl acksbelly give me a disappointed look. If anything, she was just a bit too romantic, Martha was.

"No," says I, cheering up a little. "I am going to do something they ain't many fellows would do, Martha. I'm going to forgive you, free and fair and open, and give you back my half of that ring, and—"

Damn it! I had forgot I had lost that half of that there ring! I remembered so quick it stopped me.

"You always kept it, Danny?" she asks me, very soft spoken, so as not to give pain to one so faithful and so noble as what I was. "Let me see it, Danny."

I made like I was feeling through all my pockets
